10. Course Aims:
The course aims to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Assist students in the production of a Critical Reflective Journal (CRJ).</li> <li>• Encourage students to identify how theory can inform their practice.</li> <li>• Encourage students to engage in academic discourse/s surrounding Communication Design practice and theory.</li> <li>• Deliver publication design skills that enable students to produce a CRJ publication.</li> <li>• Develop students as reflective practitioners.</li> </ul>

11. Intended Learning Outcomes of Course:
At the end of the course, each student should have the ability to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Demonstrate understanding and knowledge of contemporary design theory and practice, and its relation to their own work.</li> <li>• Engage with academic discourse/s surrounding Communication Design theory and practice.</li> <li>• Present research findings in an appropriate visual and textual context.</li> <li>• Demonstrate an awareness of contemporary and historical debates surrounding practice.</li> </ul>

- Demonstrate independent learning in the development of a CRJ.
- Demonstrate effective time and project management skills to realise the CRJ.

12. Indicative Content:

The Critical Reflective Journal will take a publication format with a word count of 5000 words, with a word count allowance of 10% (both under and over).

The publication must be in English and clearly legible, including a bibliography using MHRA referencing. All references must be accurately cited (including textual and visual material). Where a citation is not credited to another party the content must be original and the authorship of the student alone (unless a collaborative practice has been declared explicitly). There should be no ambiguity regarding authorship.

The students may express appropriate design decisions in relation to their topic.

21. Additional Relevant Information:

The Critical Reflective Journal (CRJ) provides tangible evidence of the student's ability to reflect and consider their own position as a reflective practitioner within the wider context of Communication Design practice. Explicit evidence of research, theory, methodology and reflection informing the student's final project is required.

22. Indicative Bibliography:

The bibliography is available in the Library Section of CANVAS (Virtual Learning Environment).
